

Biography

My name is Nicholas Roessler and I am a recent graduate of Columbia College Chicago. I graduated in May 2010 with a bachelor's degree in ASL-English interpretation. I am currently attending Gallaudet University's graduate linguistics program. Also, I am currently working with two agencies as a freelance interpreter, Hands in Motion and Professional Interpreter Exchange, as well as work on the Gallaudet University campus as a part time tutor. I am a very hardworking individual that has made a life long goal to become a knowledgeable and skilled interpreter.

During my time at Columbia College, I had the opportunity to extensively practice the skill of interpreting. I have had the opportunity to interpret a variety of settings, which include, comedy, town hall meetings, workshops, and translating various works. This was done either as a volunteer or under the supervision of a staff member of Columbia College. Now as a freelance interpreter, I have had the opportunity to gain more experience in other settings, such as, conference and religious.

What makes me unique is that I am never satisfied with just getting through it. I always analyze and reanalyze each situation, so I can make myself exceptional, in order to better serve my clients. What I lack in experience I make up for in drive and compassion. When choosing me, one does not only get an interpreter, but also a human being that works to better his craft every waking moment that he has. I hope that we have the opportunity to work together in the future.

Sincerely,

Nicholas Roessler
